A WEIRD DREAM.

Which Furnished a Clue to Mrs. Eggleston's Murderer.

A peculiar story is told of the cause which led to the murder of Mrs. Eggleston in Antelope Valley last week.

It seems that Watkins is a sort of shyster lawyer and notary public, who will do any kind of crooked work for a fee.

Mrs. Eggleston's property consisted of 160 acres of land and a house. Her brother Mr. Schooley believing that an attempt was being made to freeze her out, homesteaded ten acres and the house in her name to protect her.

The ranch was finally sold at Sheriff's sale at the instigation of Watkins, and T. B. Rickey, it is alleged bought it in for $50. Schooley afterwards told Rickey that he could not hold the ten acres referred to, as he had a title to it, and that Watkins nor the Sheriff had a right to sell it.

Mr. Schooley also said that he had evidence against Watkins, who had been mixed up in some crooked work, which would send him to the Penitentiary. This reached Watkins in some way, and as Mrs. Eggleston was the only living witness against him, her death would naturally be a great relief to him.

Now comes the peculiar part of the story. A week or so before the murder, Mrs. Eggleston told several persons at different times, that she had a very peculiar dream. She dreamed that as she was about to open the oven door of the kitchen stove one morning, Watkins popped out with a knife in his hand, and stabbed her several times. He had a very murderous look on his face, and when she awoke, she says she experienced an extremely strange feeling, and did not seem to be in her right mind.

Parties to whom she told this, were deeply impressed and asked if she was not afraid to stay in the house alone, especially at night. She said she was old and harmless and she guessed no one would interfere with her.

When she was found dead a few days later, the dream of the dead woman was brought vividly back to the minds of those who had heard it and Watkins was immediately suspected. Subsequent developments proved him to be the murderer.

Sharpshooters Return.

Yesterday morning Guy Spencer, Henry David, C. H. Galusha, Geo. Cagwin and George Wilcox, five of the Carson Guard Shooting team, returned from San Francisco. A large number of Carsonites were present to congratulate them and shake hands.

George Wilcox says they were shooting with from nine to twelve pounds pull, and shot considerably within time limit, while the team next on the list was twelve minutes over time.

Daniel Guy Boone Spencer says he don't care whether they get the trophies or not; they got the top score anyway.

Henry David accounts for his "three" in the fact that the bullet got away from the powder in the shell, making the shot go low.

They all say that next Sunday's Examiner will contain their pictures and they will get a big sendoff.

A Thief and a Coward.

New York, March 15.—Last Saturday Victor Ledewyn, an employee of Henry Maillard, the chocolate dealer, disappeared carrying away with him $100 belonging to his employer. Ledewyn had always borne a good reputation, and his employer was loath to believe him dishonest, but the evidence against him was too strong, and the matter was put in the hands of the police.

The city was scourged, but without finding the missing man, and it was supposed that he had succeeded in getting away. This morning, however, his body was found in the dead house of one of the city hospitals. He was brought to the hospital yesterday, evidently suffering from the effects of poison. All efforts to save him proved unavailing and he died this morning. It is believed that he yielded to the temptation on Saturday, and then when he realized that he had committed a crime and the police were hunting for him committed suicide.

James Wiggins will give a Hard Times Party on March 16th, 1894, at Wiggins' Hall, Empire. Every body invited. Good stabling.

CHRIS GOTTSCHALK MISSING.

No Trace of Him Since 9 O'clock Tuesday Night. When He Had About $100 in His Possession.

Yesterday's Journal says: There was considerable excitement yesterday afternoon and evening on the street on account of the mysterious disappearance of Chris Gottschalk of the Arcade Hotel. He has not been seen since night before last about 9 o'clock. The theory of foul play has been advanced and the officers scoured the city high and low, but without finding any trace of him.

Last evening a squaw was reported to have said that the body of a white man was in a ditch near the poor farm. Several parties at once went out and searched at the place indicated by the squaw, and also all the neighboring ditches and streams without finding any sign of a human body.

The fact of Gottschalk being missing lent color to the supposition that if there was a body lying in a ditch it must be his. Several went out to the Indian camp to see the squaw, when she denied she had said any such thing.

Tuesday Gottschalk drew $250 from the Bank of Nevada which he had on deposit, and out of this paid several bills about town and $75 for his first month's rent. He must have had about $100 in his possession at the time of his disappearance.

Inquiry at the ticket office revealed the fact that no ticket was sold him the night before. The conductor on the train going west was James Gussford and when he returned on No. 1 last evening said that no person got on the train here the night before who did not have a ticket, and he did not see Gottschalk on board. This missing man was at one time not long since engaged to a young lady in Oakland, and many were of the belief that he had slipped off slyly, intending to return in a few days with a bride. A dispatch was sent her yesterday asking if he had been there, and she answered not.

The case is certainly mysterious, and while it does not seem plausible that in case he had been foully dealt with, robbery being the object, his body would have been hidden at least so effectually, yet if he has only gone away he has done so in a manner to cover up every trace of his departure.
